

Camilo A. Azcarate

Camilo is the Manager of Mediation Services at the World Bank. Previously, he was the Ombudsman at Princeton University, the Director of the Conflict Resolution Institute at the Center for Leadership and Innovation/ FGCU and Government Programs Coordinator for the Massachusetts Office of Dispute Resolution (MODR). He has over 15 years of dispute resolution experience as mediator, facilitator, conflict system designer and Ombudsman.

Camilo has presented, trained, lectured and taught graduate-level mediation and dispute resolution programs at Princeton and Columbia Universities. He has published papers on journals of Peace Studies and Conflict Resolution and articles on magazines of the Association for Conflict Resolution (ACR) and International Ombudsman Association (IOA), in the areas of international conflict, identity conflicts, cross-cultural conflicts in mediation and conflict in the workplace.

Camilo was a member the Program on International Conflict Analysis and Resolution (PICAR) at Harvard. He holds a Juris Doctor from Universidad Javeriana, a Masters in Corporate Law and a Masters in Dispute Resolution from the University of Massachusetts. He has received several awards for his work in dispute resolution, including the “Don Paulson Award for Excellence in Dispute Resolution” and the award for “Outstanding Achievement in Dispute Resolution”.